III. Read the following poem and answer the questions by underlining the most appropriate option. (05 marks)

Gone

Emotions run through my head
I found myself wishing I was dead
All because you were moving away
I knew I would never see you another day

You got into your car and waved goodbye
and then I was left all alone to cry
I felt helpless, and all alone
I could only talk to you on the phone

You were my neighbour, and my best friend
Why, Oh why did it have to end?
You made me so happy, so carefree
You made it feel okay for me to be me

It's been almost a year since you moved away
but it feels like it was only yesterday
I remember everything you used to do
It may seem impossible, but it's true

You were the best friend I ever had
Now that you left me, I am beyond sad
I love and I miss you more than you ever knew
You've taught me so much, and I want to say thank you

(Stephanie M. Wendorf)

IV Read the following text and do the activity that follows. (05 marks)

Mother's Love

My mother had only one eye. I hated her....... She was such an embarrassment. She cooked for students and teachers to support the family. One day during elementary school when my mother came to say hello to me, I was so embarrassed. How could she do this to me? I ignored her, threw her a hateful look and ran out. The next day at school one of my classmates said, 'EEEE, your mother has only one eye!' I wanted to bury myself. I also wanted my mother to just disappear... I confronted her that day and said, 'If you're only going to make me a laughing stock, why don't you just die?' She did not respond... I didn't even stop to think for a second about what I had said, because I was full of anger. I was oblivious to her feelings. I wanted to go out of that house, and have nothing to do with her. So I studied really hard and got a chance to go abroad to study.

Then, I got married. I bought a house of my own. I had kids of my own. I was happy with my life, my kids and the comforts. Then one day, my mother came to visit me. She hadn't seen me in years and she hadn't even met her grandchildren. When she stood by the door, my children laughed at her, and I yelled at her for coming over uninvited. I screamed at her, "How dare you come to my house and scare my children! GET OUT OF HERE! NOW!!!"

And to this, my mother quietly answered, 'Oh, I'm so sorry. I may have got the wrong address' and she disappeared out of sight. One day, a letter regarding a school reunion came to my house. I lied to my wife that I was going on a business trip and went for it. After the reunion, I went to the old shack just out of curiosity. My neighbours said that she had died. I did not shed a single tear. They handed me a letter that she had wanted me to have.

My dearest son,

I think of you all the time. I'm sorry that I came to your house and scared your children. I was so glad when I heard you were coming for the reunion. But I may not be able to even get out of bed to see you. I'm sorry that I was a constant embarrassment to you when you were growing up. You see... when you were very little, you met with an accident and lost your eye. As a mother, I couldn't stand watching you having to grow up with one eye. So I gave you mine. I was so proud of my son who was seeing a whole new world for me in my place with that eye.

With all my love to you,

Your mother.

Write True or False in the space provided beside each statement.

(a) The mother earned money to run the family by preparing meals for the students and teachers. (............)

(b) The son scolded his mother when she visited him at the elementary school. (............)

(c) The son scolded his mother because she came to frighten the children. (............)

(d) The son most probably wanted to see his mother when he went for the reunion. (............)

(e) The son had not known how his mother lost her eye until he read the letter. (............)

A man was going up to bed, when his wife told him he'd left the light on in the garden shed – she could see it from the bedroom window. But he said that he hadn't been in the shed that day. He looked, and there were men in the shed, stealing things. He rang the police, but they told him that no one was in his area, so no one was available to catch the thieves.

He said OK, hung up, counted to 30 and rang the police again. "Hello. I just rang you a few seconds ago because there were people in my shed. Well, you don't have to worry about them now, I've just shot them all."

Within five minutes there were half a dozen police cars in the area and an Armed Response Unit. Of course, they caught the burglars red-handed. One of the policemen said to this man: "I thought you said you'd shot them!"

He replied, "I thought you said there was no one available!"

II. From the word or words given in brackets, underline the word or words closest in meaning to the words in bold print as they appear in the following texts. (10 marks)

(1) Cheques have largely replaced money as a means of exchange, for they are widely accepted everywhere. Though it is very convenient (comfortable, readily accepted, saving time and effort) for both buyer and seller, it should not be forgotten that cheques are not real money.

(2) The children asked their mother to make cup cake for tea. But she refused saying that she had a tremendous (very great, very important, very difficult) amount of work to finish before evening. However, she promised to make the cup cakes the next day.

(3) On my last visit to the hotel, the manager told me that I could have my usual room, but he added apologetically (warningly, nervously, regrettably) that I might find it a bit noisy.

(4) Now that smoking is considered (found, told, thought) to be very dangerous to one's health, it is especially difficult for children to buy cigarettes or tobacco.

(5) Old Sally Gibbs was a very strange (unknown, unusual, funny) woman. She lived in a beautiful house with a lovely garden, but she hardly went out. Though a servant looked after her, her only real companions were her two cats. For years she had refused to see any of her relations as she felt that all they were interested in was her money. When she died she left the whole of her wealth to her two cats!

(6) My parents had great expectations (felt very confident, felt very happy, guided very well) that I would become a famous lawyer. But I disappointed them by becoming a clerk in an office.

(7) When I joined this office I found the manager difficult to get on with. He had a very short temper and shouted at me for the slightest mistake I made. But soon I got accustomed (tolerated, used, annoyed) to his rude manner.

(8) My friend died under mysterious circumstances (condition, disease, accident). We all suspect foul play regarding this.

PART C - COMPREHENSION (30 marks)

I. Read the following text and do the activities that follow. (10 marks)

Do we know if the food we consume is free of germs which can cause over 200 diseases ranging from diarrhoea to cancer? Every year diarrhoea caused by contaminated food and water kills 2.2 million people, including 1.9 million children globally. Unsafe food kills an estimated 700,000 children in South East Asia every year.

Food safety is critical for public health as food-borne diseases affect people's health and well being. Unsafe food creates a vicious cycle of disease and malnutrition, particularly affecting infants, young children, the elderly and the sick. Food-borne diseases impede socio-economic development by straining health care systems and adversely impacting national economies, tourism and trade. Since food passes through multiple hands from the farm to reach our plates, ensuring food safety requires multi-sectoral collaboration. The approach needs to be preventive to improve food safety and quality through application of good farming practices by using agro chemicals or veterinary drugs only in the prescribed amount. Good storage, transportation, retail and restaurant practices are equally important to make food safe.

Street foods are emerging as an important source of food for a large proportion of the population in urban and peri-urban settings. Street food as a source of food-borne diseases, therefore, assumes public health significance.

Countries need to have a comprehensive food safety policy, legislation and national food safety programmes encompassing all the sectors and aspects for food safety. Enforcement of food safety policies in the region remains a challenge. Food quality and safety standards are usually strictly followed for exportable food commodities, but not always enforced for food destined for the domestic market. Food safety and quality should be ensured through stringent control and inspection mechanisms for export as well as the domestic market.

Adapted from The Sunday Times - 5.4.2015

II. Read the following text and do the activities that follow. (20 marks)

The proposal to increase the expenditure on education from 1.3% to 6% is certainly good for the country given that the World Bank South Asia recently reported that the poor quality of education is holding back South Asia. No doubt, Sri Lanka needs a well-educated workforce if we are to sustain long periods of growth. Therefore, the universities would need to turn out their graduates with the hard and the soft skills employers want. To do this, all our key institutions have an obligation to work together to ramp up the skills of our nation's talent pool and for that they need to engage with employers to understand the skills and competencies our employees need now and in the future.

Many reasons have been given by very eminent people both in the public and the private sector at various forums regarding the unemployment and underemployment situation among the educated youth. The most important hypothesis is the prevalence of a skills mismatch where the education system is not providing what the labour market needs. Another explanation given is that the public sector employment and wage policies in the country lead to a queueing behaviour among the population for attractive jobs. A third hypothesis is the existence of stringent labour market regulations that prevents employment creation in the private sector. Even though we are aware of these challenges, graduate unemployment is still a huge problem in Sri Lanka. Despite many genuine attempts being made to bring about a solution to the problem, the attempts have largely failed because the current education and the skills development infrastructure both in the public and the private sectors have still not been re-oriented fully to improve the quality of education in the country.

Therefore, unless we make those fundamental changes within our education system in the country, the system will not deliver the numbers and quality desired and we will continue to have forum after forum to find solutions for graduate unemployment. So in the short-term, the private sector and the university system need to identify the current and future skills requirements and re-orient the curriculum based on the needs of the private sector. Next, the state needs to work with the education/training providers to re-orient the infrastructure to deliver the skills that the country requires. Many surveys have revealed that in general, university graduates lack the basic skills sought by employers. Hence, the government, the university administrators, employers and graduates themselves must all endeavour to find a practical solution to fill this gap. Today, despite many interventions, we are still confronted with three key issues; (a) our universities do not generate the required skills for the country, (b) our graduates lack knowledge about the reality of the labour market, and (c) many graduates prefer to join the public sector and be underemployed.

Therefore, in order to create more productive jobs for the educated, the private-public links need to be strengthened and the higher education system needs to be re-oriented to refocus from supply to demand.
